Industrial Rehabilitation

Injuries in the workplace are common occurrences, particularly in a labor-intensive environment like southeast Texas. Memorial Hermann WorkLink offers work-hardening and work-conditioning programs that not only help rehabilitate employees after an injury but also focus on injury prevention.

The Industrial Rehabilitation Program offers evaluation processes and treatment plans with quantifiable, predictable and reproducible results. Our highly skilled multidisciplinary clinicians design injury-specific programs, tailored to the injured worker's job and type of injury, and they treat the injured worker in the most effective and efficient manner. Our Successful Returns[®] program reflects our commitment to quality, communication and customer service.

Communication between physicians, employers, case managers and insurance carriers, as well as education of the injured worker, are essential to the Industrial Rehabilitation process. Our program provides evaluations, treatment plans, behavior modification and education services that facilitate case closure and help prevent future work-related injuries.

Established in 1988, Successful Returns[®] includes these comprehensive Industrial Rehabilitation services:

- Work Hardening/Work Conditioning Programs accredited by the Commission on Accreditation of Rehabilitation Facilities (CARF)
